

Kiss the Coho Goodbye?

© Ray Troll – www.trollart.com

Not If We Can Help It.

Oregon coho salmon are in trouble.

Over the last three years, scientists have recorded a 50% decline in adult coho. Spawners have plummeted to only 90,000 fish. The number used to be 2 million.

Yet the Bush Administration, along with Governor Kulongoski, took away their federal protection – and their best hope for survival.

Recreational and commercial salmon fishing businesses are in danger now too. Let's bring back the lifeblood of our Oregon communities. Let's save the coho.

TOGETHER, WE CAN RESTORE OREGON'S WILD SALMON HERITAGE.

To help save the coho, visit Pacific Rivers Council's website at www.pacrivers.org
Or call 541/345-0119

Paid for by

Pacific Rivers Council

Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations

Trout Unlimited

Native Fish Society